Highlight Session

Basic Research 1

ENG/KOR
(Simultaneous Interpretation)

Renal Genomics

Date & Time June 13 (Thu), 15:30-17:00 Venue Room 201 (2F), Coex

Renal genomics refers to the application of genetics and bioinformatics to the study of kidney diseases. While curing renal genetic diseases remains challenging, recent research in this field has provided insights that can enhance patient prognoses and mitigate complications. Genetic diseases fundamentally involve intricate mechanisms related to genetic variations, necessitating individualized treatments. This session features lectures by leading researchers in the field, offering new possibilities for understanding renal genetic diseases, developing diagnostic technologies, and their clinical applications.

Daw-Yang Hwang
National Institute of Cancer Research, Taiwan

Lecture Title

Genetics of ADPKD, ADTKD, and Adult Proteinuria

Jia Rao
Children's Hospital of Fudan University, China

Lecture Title

Navigate Childhood Kidney Disease through Genotyping and Phenotyping

Amali Mallawaarachchi
Garvan Institute of Medical Research, Australia

Lecture Title

Genomic Diagnostics in Nephrology

Beom Hee Lee
Asan Medical Center, Korea

Lecture Title

Clinical Application of Genome Testing in Kidney Disease
